

California Department of Public Health (CDPH) is launching a Hepatitis B Demonstration Project in the San Francisco Bay Area. The project aims to increase hepatitis B virus (HBV) testing and vaccination among the Chinese community.

Approximately 12 million people in the United States are infected with HBV, and 1 million of those are at risk of liver disease. In the San Francisco Bay Area, 86% of people aged 65 and older have never been tested for HBV. The project will target 37.3% of the Chinese community in the area.

Tomás Aragón, Director of CDPH, will lead the project. The project is expected to run from 2020 to 2030. The project will be a partnership between CDPH, Chinese Hospital, and the Chinese Community Health Resource Center.

CDPH is committed to reducing health disparities and improving the health of all Californians. The project is a key part of CDPH's strategy to address the health needs of diverse communities.

CDPH is seeking community members who are interested in participating in the project. For more information, please contact the project team at 1-628-228-2828 or visit the project website.
